

Kevin Love

Kevin is a lawyer in CLAS's Community Law Program, working primarily in the areas of mental health and workers' rights. Kevin has represented clients at all levels of court, both federally and provincially, including the Supreme Court of Canada. His current practice includes providing legal advice and assistance to clients with respect to adult guardianship and mental health legislation. Prior to joining the Community Law Program, Kevin worked in CLAS's Mental Health Law Program representing clients detained in psychiatric facilities under the Criminal Code.

Kevin represents CLAS on a number of committees, including WorksafeBC's Policy and Practice Consultative Committee. Kevin also acts as the supervising lawyer for the First United Church's legal advocacy program in Vancouver's Downtown Eastside.
